E-MAIL RE. SOLAR PANELS

Thank you for your enquiry regarding solar PV. Please accept my apologies for the delay in responding to you (this has been due to the overwhelming interest we have had of late). Below a written report looking at your house, whilst attached is an image of a estimated arrangement and a summary of the numbers.

Looking at your house: The main roof of your houses faces East/West and for our calculations we have assumed it to have a pitch of 35 degrees. There are no clear obstructions to your roofs solar access.

Planning: There is usually no planning problem with PV panels unless you are in a Conservation area. Normally, these are Permitted Development. You are ALWAYS advised to send a courteous letter to your Planning officer just to make sure, and notify them of your intention. This is free unless you are in a conservation area.

Looking at how panels might fit: looking at your roofshape, you should be able to fit 22 panels, in 2 rows one on either side of the roof.

For this estimate we are assuming the use of 185Watt panels of 1m x 1.3m size, the most common on the market. If you have a small roof, it is possible to reconfigure your layout with panels of up to 240Watts per panel.

Cost: this arrangement should cost inc 5% Vat, about £14,500 for 22 panels and about £500 for the scaffolding. Note, we are not installers, we are giving you a budget outline to guide you when talking to real installers. If this is way beyond budget consider fewer panels, but unit costs are lower with larger installation. The VAT rate will remain at 5% after January 2011.

Generating: for 22 panels, that would provide a nominal 3.96 kW and bring in approx. 2710 kWh per year (Ones we have known already installed do better than the expected - however, every season is different, and the panels are affected by air and surface temperature which is why east facing panels work better than west facing. So precise forecast of performance is estimated, but not guaranteed.)

Income and Savings:

The income from FiT and sales might be about £1,159 a year, and assuming your present consumption is about 3500 kWh, you might save about £184 in using your own home generated electricity.

So that adds to about £1,344 overall. If you now pay about £500 a year now for your power and lighting, you would have a clear tax-free surplus (from which to pay your gas bill).

Payback: In payback terms, that is 8.97%, about 11.15 years, which better than the usual 8% because your house has a clear unobstructed view and a good roofpitch. If you compound the income by anticipating that energy prices will rise (and that your payments are index linked) your payback is about 10% quicker. Roof thoughts: If your roof is very old and fragile, and if you do not have underfelt, or you suspect rot in the timbers, undersized rafters, flaking tiles, slipping slates, chimneys about to shed pots or bricks, ridge or hiptiles about to fly..... do not continue. The panels last over 25 years and if your roof needs a refurbishment or felting sooner than 25 yrs it would be expensive to take all off, add felt, retile and refix panels - do it now, then put the panels on after. On the positive side, a mesh of strong alloy rails attached to your roof will make it stiffer, and the rainscreen effect of the panels will protect your roof against future weathering.

Insurance thoughts: The panels become fully part of your house and your insurer will usually add these freely in when you your system is fully commissioned - but if you haven't told them, they wouldnt know, and you would not be covered - so phone them.

Reflections on Payback: People should not get too obsessive about payback (which assumes a value of nil after the period). The income is for 25 years and is index linked so the income swells annually. The rights to the income pass on to your successors, which means that you have added sellable value on your house, at the end of less than 12.5 yrs at least equivalent to the entire cost. The income is tax free, adding another 20% value to the payback. There is no payback on your car (unless you are a taxi driver) and none on your holidays (unless you are a travel writer). In the future, there will be premium value on houses with higher energy performance.

Reflections on energy conservation: If you already have a very high energy consumption, do not forget that there are cheaper ways to cut your bills than to spend several thousand on a Photovoltaic roof. Do an energy audit on your house and lifestyle - improve insulation, see if windows are adequate, instal energy efficient light bulbs, turn off standby devices at night, reduce your thermostat by a couple of degrees, have more showers than baths, turn off external spotlights, adjust your central heating programmer to turn off earlier in the evening and later in the morning.... and many more such ideas, some of which cost nothing. Keep all your energy bills, and look at them going back for the last two years, calculating both your energy consumption per year for electricity and gas.

Once you have considered all this, return to your original idea: hundreds or thousands of small home generators can make a beneficial difference to the overall energy picture - and they can be an excellent financial investment for you!

Installers

We have a number of solar PV installers, all of whom are MCS certified, and who have agreed to contribute a subscription fund to maintain Rushcliffe Solar through to Summer 2011.

We would prefer you to use these ones from our list.

If you wish to install, please forward our name to the installer, so that we might be partially funded for giving this free advice.

The sponsors on our list have agreed to pay Rushcliffe Solar a referral fee, but any fee they provide to Rushcliffe Solar is entirely from their marketing and survey budget and will not affect their pricing to their potential customers.

What we should ask you is not to incite a bidding war between our suppliers by inviting 'gazundering'. They have a living to make, and as far as we know them, their prices are all reasonably in line with current industry prices. There are fluctuations in world prices of components and also in currency exchange values, and they do their best to source as economically as possible, for your benefit.

If you take the view of 'wait a bit longer, and things will get cheaper', that is a mistake, because there is a 'degression' system built into the feed in tariff that reduces the FiT every year for the remainder of the period, so the FiT will be halved over 12 yrs.

Hope that helps, Please see the website for more info about PV, the About PV page is useful. If you have a further question, please ask.

Kind Regards,

James Rixon
